

- Going clockwise and keeping in turn, if the next person has the same link, then he/she can add it, and so on until all have had the opportunity to add to that link. As you seek to add your link, it is important to say why you think it is similar – as this helps to build meaning and understanding. (If you do not have a similar link, you say 'pass'.)
- When the circle has been completed, the person to the left of person A introduces a new link, and the process begins again until all the links have been placed on the table.

If any individual links remain at the end, the group may be able to agree where they might best fit with another link, or they may stay separate as singletons

Step 3 (10 minutes)

Take each pile in turn. Agree together why you think it is important to make this link.
